London, UK, July 7th, 2015:

Orb Vision, the London based mobile app and game developer, known for previous titles such as Brain Bumble and Real Time Racing, is about to launch a new racing game with a twist. This new release is WTR Racing, the very first mobile racing game for Apple iOS that features both street racing and drift racing. The game release date has been set for July 10th, 2015.

WTR Racing combines street racing and drift racing in a seamless environment. Players are free to choose between a storyline driven single player mode, and a multiplayer leaderboard style of gameplay.

In single player mode, the player will race against, and attempt to eliminate six separate race crews, to win the title King of the City Streets. In multiplayer mode, the player will race against other players in real-time, and attempt to gain the top leaderboard position.

The player is also able to connect their WTR Racing game to the Game Center. Once this has been done, the player will begin to earn in-game cash and other rewards for completing achievements, beating challenges and improving their position on the multiplayer leaderboard.

In both modes, the player has access to 50 different cars. Each of these vehicles can be fully customized. The customization options include car weight, engine performance, handling, and gear ratios. Additionally, vehicle styling customization is also available.

WTR Racing from Orb Vision is due for release via the Apple Store on the 10th of July 2015. For more information about the game, the WTR Racing website can be found at the following URL:
